

Karma in Time

Listen to the sound, the season is bearing down.

State of emergency, bringing great urgency, fire and flood.

Reasons will be proposed.

The elements in disarray.

The curse of man exposed.

This is once in a life.

Industrial design.

Karma in time.

Who can stop the thunder, who will stop the rain?

When the lightning strikes, it's a catastrophe and we're all left to bear the pain.

Our suffering is tantamount to war.

We won't take advantage.

We will not seek the law.

Ships are lost at sea, houses washed away.

People flee the storm, while others make their choice to stay.

Helping hands come from afar but they're too late for the call.

Hailing down a rescue, while you're holding on.

There's not the room for them all.

Only will we know after the storm clears.

Our lives we must forgo.

Realising our past fears.

In our final throes, the Earth is exposed.
